“ Cindi changed my life! I owe her a huge debt. It was Cindi who I just couldn't miss, as she pursued her activism alongside a main street in Arvada. Her big smile and little cowboy hat compelled me to see what I could do. Through activism with Cindi, she became a dear friend and, through her, I met other dear friends, and found a deep interest in helping here in our city. And, later, when I lost my son, Cindi was right there in the middle of everyone who kept me going during that time. I cannot believe that such a force and light is gone so soon from us. My heart goes out to her husband, son, other family, and many friends.
