“ I know nobody here will know who I am, but I know Jayden. It would feel wrong not to say something, since I heard a month ago I have been thinking of him nonstop. While growing up my parents faught and sometimes I'd go to school unable to sit down due to bruises. Jayden was a wild one back then. I'd get to band early morning and he'd be giving everyone a reason to smile and laugh. I can admit I took those days for granted. One day I realized that. In 2024 I reached out. He was struggling. We talked about three days. That's all it took to realize even people who seem happy and fulfilled can feel alone too. After those few days I wished him well. He never knew but without him I probably wouldn't have made it this far. It's sad. We all feel alone sometimes and we never tell people when they change that. If we did though, maybe just maybe. They could feel less alone too. Back then he was just a goofy guy. But now I know he's in all my best memories. From taco bell; silly jokes instead of names for orders. To him making silly sounds with his trumpet. We never said we were friends but to me looking back, that's exactly what he was for me. I'll forever be thankful. 🙏👍😞

“ For My Dearest Johnny and Your Family/Loved Ones: May God Bless you and your family and friends. I am so sorry your precious Jayden is no longer here with you, but know that he's still here with you in spirit.

No doubt he was a GOOD man and GOOD men never die; You will see him many times more. You will feel him in all things that are here out of love, and for love. The person of a man may leave or be taken away, but the best part of a GOOD man stays FOREVER. Surely he will always be remembered, loved, and missed. May he continue to Rest in Peace, Paradise, and Power in the arms of God and Jesus, for now he's an Angel. ❤️ Love Always, Your Neighbor: Barbara King, Sierra Vista, Arizona
