“ Joe was always a colorful character in this region. I partied with Joe. More than once. I knew him through my father the late George Montgomery Sr. Both Smelly Dombroski and George were best of friends. Whenever my dad related a story about downhome (smelly) was in the story. They nursed many hangovers together. Yep a rough and tumble lot wearing black leather enjoying fast cars and danger. kicking it at good old Yonkerville dine and dance as teens. I miss all of them. Actually they all were peace loving men. God bless them right now at this moment and forever.

“ Joe was definitely one of a kind.He will be deeply missed by so many. I remember he had these black berries that would grow out behind his house,I believe they still do, I had commented once that I'd like to have some growing like that, he said "well let's go get you some," he went out in the cold and dug up 6 plants, and now I have them taking over my place, sometimes you do get what you ask for, it was funny at the time, but I will forever cherish them, and think of him especially at harvest. He was a very giving person, and always there to help.
